SATURDAY JUNE 26, 1909

It is easy finding reasons why other folks should be patient. — George Elliot.

While in doubt about the strike do some thing to help Honolulu.

The cruiser St. Louis is welcome. May she be the forerunner of a squadron to come later for summer maneuvers.

Admiral Ijichi, starting in where he left off, still finds enough welcoming in Honolulu to fill another week brim full.

Governor Peary is quite correct in conferring with the Attorney General on complaints laid by the agitators. These people are entitled to the full limit of fair play as well as the law.

When transportation bonds of Oahu are refunded at five per cent, it shows that the men in search of the highest class of investment have full confidence in the future of this place and its enterprises.

A good evidence of Honolulu's feeling toward the reputable Japanese is found in the Commercial Club dinner complimentary to Admiral Ijichi and the leading business men of the Japanese colony.

It is timely to remind Honolulu searchers that the New York auto searcher who killed a small boy had a close call from being sent to the electric chair. Criminal carelessness is next door to murder.

The Bulletin's Hilo correspondent forgot to mention that the butcher or saloon keeper who runs the Hawaii "Union" enjoys the distinction of possessing a supporting American weekly doing what it may.

A New York Judge has sentenced an automobile searcher to prison for seven years. Throughout the country the people applaud. The man who uses a powerful machine as a plaything and kills people should pay the full penalty of his folly.

Now that the origin of the moon has been settled, there is still hope of an explanation why the Governor of this Territory will not give the public the letters written relative to the disposition of valuable lands supposed to belong to the Territory of Hawaii.

The Bulletin finds a very general objection to Supt. Campbell's plan to meter the water supplied to Honolulu householders. The reason for the objection is that the people will undoubtedly sacrifice their lawns and the garden spots about their homes if by so doing they can economize on their water bill. This will lead to a community loss, because half the attraction this city offers the resident and the visitor is the beauty of the grounds surrounding the homes. These arguments are not put forward by those who believe that the Superintendent of Public Works has forgotten that the conditions here cannot properly be compared with mainland cities and towns where water for lawns and flower gardens is a matter for consideration during only a few months of the year.

SECRECY AND PUBLIC AFFAIRS.

The public officer who excuses the policy of secrecy in the conduct of public business by calling somebody names immediately admits that his position is vulnerable and capable of no justification.

He is an efficient officer who carries the public with him, through full discussion and ample publicity. And if he does not follow this course, in an American community he will find that he gains a steadily increasing measure of justifiable lack of confidence on the part of the people. The claim that the Liquor Commission should act on matters of public policy behind closed doors because it is a judicial body is on about the same order as an excuse for the secrecy of the Governor in handling public land matters, on the basis that the Governor of this particular Territory is or ought to be an Oligarch.

The officer and the commission that takes the people into confidence on public matters will succeed. The policy of secrecy is the certain forerunner of failure.

SUNDAY LIQUOR AND HOTELS.

The restaurant keeper who abuses the Sunday privilege for the sale of liquor has no cause for complaint if his license is revoked or renewal refused.

The right or wrong involved in the sale of liquor by restaurants on Sunday for the accommodation of the public is a matter of policy entirely apart from the individual infractions of the law or of License Commission regulations.

To allow the hotels to sell liquor on Sunday and refuse reputable restaurants is to bring up the old question of discrimination.

On moral grounds the charge laid against serving liquor on Sundays in restaurants is not unlike that which was made by some good people against Sunday baseball. They made up their minds that Sunday sport was wrong, and that was the end of it. Experience proved otherwise.

The plan to prohibit liquor in the law-abiding restaurants of the city and grant the privilege of Sunday sale in hotels means that a good number of people who will not patronize the hotels will be led or driven to low dives where liquor is sold illicitly and amid the most evil surroundings.

It means, for instance, when a warship is in port, that the officers will go to any of the hotels, but a certain element among the men, the man "looking for a drink," will more likely turn up in some illicit joint.

That is the practical phase of it, whether applied to the men of a warship, steamship or residents of the town.

Is it better for the people who congregate "down town" on a Sunday to be served with liquor with meals if they want it, or should this be prohibited and the community take the chance of the men going to a low dive?

This paper does not consider the monopoly phase as particularly serious. It is more a question of how best to handle the population that think more of a drink than of where they get it, a section of the population that would not go to the hotels of the city under any circumstances.

The fair method of procedure would be to either close the town completely on Sunday or give Sunday privileges to a limited number of law-abiding restaurant keepers as well as the hotels.

License Commissioners are absolutely right in demanding a strict observance of the law or the regulations under the law. The fact that one restaurant keeper evades or violates the law should not necessarily mean that strict observance is impossible.

There is only one answer for the constant violator of the law.

The policy of allowing the sale of liquor on a Sunday in eating houses as well as hotels is one that must be shaped with a proper regard for the character of the permanent and transient population.

Holiday For Lumbermen.—Spokane, June 18.—A plan is being developed among lumbermen here to arrange for closing all the lumber mills in Washington, Oregon, Idaho and Montana for two weeks, beginning July 1. This is a request would give all millmen an opportunity to celebrate lumbermen's day at the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific fair July 1, and also to attend the manufacturers' convention at Seattle.

SUPPLY BUREAU LAW GETS THE HATCHET

Mayor Likes Too Well Present Contract System

NH, not his ways Mayor Fern, referring to the ordinance creating a Bureau of Supplies. The ordinance is vetoed, frowned down, cast off, for there is no need for it, it is a superfluity, and hence, gilt. The Supervisors laid it on the table for they get five days to look the veto over. The Mayor says that the present contract system is good enough.

Thereupon a tenement ordinance was referred to the appropriate committee with the view of getting it up to the Mayor some day. If you are three families living in a single house with a common right to the stairways, you are a tenement and cannot stay in the residence district unless your neighbors say you can. This is to be known as the Tenement Ordinance and you will be fined if you don't dissolve and live in separate institutions—providing you are three families.

DR. MACKALL IS CITY PHYSICIAN

Supervisors Confirm The Most of Fern's Appointments

With the exception of the Milk and Fish Inspector all appointments presented to the Board of Supervisors last night were confirmed, and in most cases were passed unanimously. The principal objection to those turned down seemed to be their lack of acquaintances among the Supervisors.

Dr. Bruce McV. Mackall secured the office of City Physician and Dr. W. T. Monsarrat is now the Meat Inspector. John Vychavsky and Joseph R. Durao were appointed as sanitary inspectors and Louis K. Kane as the sanitary inspector of the morgue and graveyards. All the old janitors were reappointed in the schools, the Mayor stating that this action had been recommended by Mr. Habbitt.

The first opposition to the Mayor's wishes came up when the name of M. N. Sanders came up for the office of Milk Inspector. The Supervisors didn't say much but frowned slightly and gloomily and despondently said no when they answered to the roll call. Mr. Sanders evidently was out of favor at the rate of 5 to 2, the vote cast against him. His Honor thereupon hinted that Joseph Silva would be acceptable as Milk Inspector but with the same gloomy despondency, the Board disagreed with him.

The discussion over the Fish Inspector was a little more vivified and although no material objection could be raised against the Mayor's candidate, there is as yet no new Fish Inspector. A. K. Williams was the first name up and the Board split at once. Supervisor Logan could find no better excuse for not voting than his acquaintance with the gentleman named and this being the feeling of his co-members, they felt it their duty to turn Mr. Williams down, which they did. Mr. Kauna was then named and suffered a like fate. Mr. Logan suggested that two members of the Board get acquainted with Mr. Williams and analyze his general character and find out whether he knew a good fish from a fish that would injure the constitution of the citizens of Honolulu.

SOME CATARRHAL AFFECTIONS PECULIAR TO HOT CLIMATES.

Catarrhal Diseases of the Abdominal Organs Treated by Pe-ru-na.

Mr. Antonio Llabres Cintron, Arroyo, Porto Rico, writes: "When I commenced taking Peruna I weighed 115 pounds. After taking one bottle of the medicine I weighed 120 pounds. "My nasal catarrh has completely disappeared with the use of your marvelous medicine and I will never tire of recommending it to my many friends when they have the same trouble."

Although catarrh of the head and throat are not infrequent in hot climates, yet catarrh of the stomach, catarrh of the bowels, catarrh of the kidneys, and catarrh of the pelvic organs are most frequent.

The catarrh of warm climates assumes a phase peculiar to such countries.

It may not at all resemble the catarrh of cold climates in appearance, yet it is the same disease.

Catarrh means congestion of a mucous membrane.

Generally in the cold climates the membranes oftenest affected by catarrh are the ones lining the nose or the cavities of the head, throat and lungs.

The mucous membranes oftenest affected by catarrh in hot climates are the ones lining the organs of the abdomen and pelvis.

Wherever human beings dwell, whether in the tropics or the arctic, catarrh is the principal disease mankind has to contend against.

Peruna has long since been recognized as the world's standard remedy for catarrh in all its phases, stages and varieties.

Monterrey, Mexico.
Most Esteemed Sir: Peruna has produced magnificent results for those who have used it in this city. I am assured of these good results by one of our leading physicians, Senior Doctor Don Juan de Dios Trevino, whose high reputation is justly founded upon his scientific knowledge and practical skill.

That the use of Peruna may be extended everywhere for the relief of suffering humanity is the desire of

BEER AS BEVERAGE AGENT OF TEMPERANCE.

The general prohibition wave that has been sweeping over the world during the past few years has had the effect of separating beer from the category of spirituous beverages, where it has often been erroneously placed by temperance and prohibition advocates.

The story of this change of view is best told in the Literary Digest in the issue of May 29, in which this standard publication reprints an editorial from The Hospital, a London medical journal.

A recent issue of the Evening Post, New York, also contained a very able editorial along the same lines. The Post argues that the brewer is the natural ally of the temperance leaders and advises them to seek the aid of the largest brewers in furthering the temperance movement.

All this is interesting inasmuch as it shows that beer is being recognized by thinking people as something more than a beverage and that a man can drink beer and still be a temperance advocate.

Col. Sam Parker and his son were among the arrivals this morning from Waimea, Hawaii. They were accompanied by George Davies, who went along with them.
